David Snyder

David Snyder was born in sunny Southern California in a year long enough ago for him to now qualify as “middle aged.” Except for a brief stint in Tallahassee, Florida, as a post-doctoral researcher, he has lived in the greater New York area since he moved to New Jersey for graduate school at Rutgers, where he earned a Ph.D. in biochemistry. Following that stint in Tallahassee, David settled down in Forest Hills where he lives with his wife, Diana Walcott, and their daughter, Faith Farrah.

David is a member of the Forest Hills Jewish Center and is the recording secretary as well as the chairman of the Yellow Candle committee for the FHJC Men's Club. David currently is a professor at William Paterson University (New Jersey), where he specializes in biophysical and computational chemistry and is the faculty advisor for the campus chapter of Hillel. David is famous for his red hair and beard, his horrific and truly painful puns, and his tendency to burst into song in spite of his horrible singing voice.
